Died Age 21

Drug Overdose

We lost our 21 year old daughter, Meggin, 28 February 2005 to drugs. She was the light of our life and it seems like our light has gone out. We will never forget the promise that she held for a brighter tomorrow or the joy that having her in our lives brought us. But it brought us heartache to watch her take her light from the world the way she did.

She leaves behind a younger brother who is devastated by the loss of his sister and the comradery they will never share as adults together. We will never totally get over our loss or the loss the world will suffer for not knowing Meggin or the joy she brought to others.

We also hope that no other family will have to experience the loss of life and of hope that we have experienced this last year. We hope that tomorrow will bring a better day for all of our children--free of drugs and the devastation they cause families.

We hope that God watches over the children who are being tempted to throw away their lives on drugs today and tomorrow and every day that follows. But we know that some of these children will succumb to the lure of drugs and we can only pray that their families and friends will not have to endure the loss that we have suffered.

A grieving mother., Lynn Bernhard
